Farm program

enterprises for Southside Virginia and helping farmers of small acreages find supplemental crops are high on the Nottoway priority list.

"Next fall, we'll start a double cropping system using broccoli, spring onions, cauliflower and cabbage," Compton said. "Market demand and development will determine if we try other alternative crops.

"Only 30 acres of the farm are suitable for intensive cultivation, so hay, pasture, and possibly a Christmas tree and loblolly pine project will occupy the other 100 acres.

"The farm, abandoned in 1967, needs plenty of work to make it productive again," Compton said. "We have a lot of land clearing, soil testing, and lime applications ahead of us, but it looks as if we'll put in our first corn crop this spring."

The idea of a teaching farm has been discussed for several years, Compton said. Little came of it until a task force researched the idea and recommended in May that the farm be established in Nottoway County.

The plan formulated quickly as state agencies pooled assets. Virginia Extension develops the educational programs and the Virginia Department of Agriculture helps in the funding and procuring of markets for supplemental farm products.

The State Department of Corrections, which owned the land, provides farm management and labor. The farm is contiguous to the new minimum security prison being built in Nottoway County.

Buildings and water systems owned by Piedmont Hospital, adjacent to the farm, will be made available to the teaching project and classroom instruction will be conducted in Blackstone at the Southern Piedmont Research and Continuing Education Center.

The project also is intended to give the prison inmates training for entry-level agricultural labor.

"Inmates with appropriate backgrounds and interest will be selected for appropriate training," Compton said. "Prisoners will do much of the land preparation, planting and harvesting. This experience should help them in finding employment once they're released."

Virginia residents interested in enrolling in the new program can get additional information at a local Extension office.

SEC mails credit checks

Some 13,530 capital credit checks, totaling $100,121.26, were recently mailed to persons who were members of Southside Electric Cooperative and who purchased electric service from the cooperative during the year 1964. The SEC Board of Directors approved the repayment of the 1964 capital credits because 1983 was a successful year for the cooperative.

The concept of a rural electric cooperative is unique in that it is a member-owned organization, and, any margins (profits) that are made during a given year are assigned back to cooperative member-owners. These margins are then paid in cash back to members as the cooperative is able to do so. Margins represent any funds collected by the cooperative that are in excess of the actual cost of the operation of the cooperative.

The capital credit checks that individual SEC members will receive represents, approximately 4.94 percent of the amount of the total electric service bill that each member paid during 1964. This is the first year since 1977 that SEC has been able to make capital credit refunds, and the cooperative hopes to be able to continue making capital credit payments on an annual basis in the future.

Good News for Homemakers

A Good New Year project

By SHIRLEY W. WALTON
Extension Agent

Unslightly kitchen cabinets may look as though they have to be refinished. But they may just need a thorough cleaning, and what a good project to start during the early days of the New Year.

Kitchen cabinets are constantly subject to cooking, dishwashing and other activities, so they get dirtier than other cabinets found elsewhere in the home. Grimey stains concentrate around cabinet handles of doors and drawers and are especially unattractive on definite finishes. The longer grease dirt builds up, the more difficult it becomes to remove. Kitchen soils can generally be washed off with a solution of detergent and water if they do not accumulate for too long.

In determining the kind of care required, consideration needs to be given to the type of material or finish of the cabinet. A good way to check whether or not a certain type of treatment will work for your cabinet is to clean the inside of one of the doors. If it cleans nicely, then this may be just the way you should clean the outside of the cabinets.

Wood, the traditional cabinet material, comes in a variety of finishes. There are deep, dark tones, the lighter fruit woods and white. Unpainted wooden cabinets are also available that can be painted or stained accordingly with the kitchen decor.

Laminated plastics or wood grain vinyls are used for cabinets that offer a variety of colors, patterns and texture effects. The finish is scratch resistance and easy to clean. It is very similar to some of our newer paneling products that are on the market now.

All-steel cabinets come in a variety of colors, finishes and those of good quality have a coating of rust preventive material and a baked-on enamel finish.

Regular cleaning will keep any type of kitchen cabinets in good shape. A creamy liquid wax that cleans and waxes helps keep cabinets soil-free. For periodic care of cabinets, washing with a detergent solution may be necessary and an all-purpose household cleaner may also be used. Check your package instructions carefully to be sure that the cleaner can be applied to any type cabinet surface.

Start by wiping the solution over the surface with a cloth. Rinse the cloth in clean water and wring it out. Wipe off the surface thoroughly. Use a clean dry cloth to buff the cabinet dry immediately. This also helps to maintain the luster and prevents streaking. Be sure to use clean water. After your water has gotten soiled, this only causes dirty water to be spread on already dirty cabinets and a great deal of streaking follows. A detergent solution of household cleaner will usually lift stains from painted, laminated or metal surfaces. Wood cabinets may need further treatment, however.

A solvent such as a paint thinner helps to remove deeply embedded grease or wax. The product must be used with care since it is highly flammable. Be certain that the area where you are working is well ventilated and there are no open flames or pilot lights on in the kitchen. Remove drawers and doors and work outdoors as an alternative. Of course, you need warmer weather for that.

Before applying thinner to the cabinets, be sure it will not harm the wood finish. Test an inconspicuous corner of the cabinet or inside of a door by dabbing the thinner on it.

To apply paint thinner, dab it on a clean cloth and vigorous rub it on the cabinet. Turn the cloth over frequently and refold so that the dust and dirt will not be rubbed back into the wood. Change to a clean cloth as soon as the first one is saturated with grime. Rub stained areas with thinner until they look clean. Cabinets that have been treated with paint thinner may look dull. Usually their luster can be restored by applying a coat of furniture wax or polish. Apply the polish sparingly and buff immediately.

Some cabinets may be beyond the cleaning stage and refinishing is necessary, but the time and effort spent in cleaning has not been wasted. Good results in refinishing can only be achieved on clean surfaces. Grease, dirt and wax interfere with the binding of a new finish.

Homemakers, if you have a homemaking question or problem, you may call 352-9244 or write P.O. Box 488, Appomattox, VA 24522. It is always a pleasure to hear from you and to help you.

On behalf of the Appomattox County Extension Staff, I wish to extend my best wishes to you and your families for a joyous 1984. May it be filled with peace, good health and happiness.

HAPPY NEW YEAR and have a good week!

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
Alice Adams' Grand Champion Yeast Rolls

1½ cups milk
⅓ cup vegetable shortening
1 package dry yeast
½ cup warm water
5 cups plain flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar

Scald milk; add shortening and cool to lukewarm. Dissolve yeast in ½ cup warm water. (If bread is needed in a hurry, use an extra ½ package of yeast.) Sift flour into large bowl, add sugar and salt. Slowly add milk and yeast to flour, mixing with a spoon. (Add more flour or warm water to make a medium soft dough.)

Knead dough for 10 minutes; place in a greased bowl and let rise until double size. Punch down and let rise again. Shape into rolls or loaves. Dip in melted butter. Place on cookie sheet or in pans and let rise until double. Heat oven to 450°. Bake rolls about 10 minutes at 450° and loaves about 20 minutes at 400°.
